Dear Single Mothers, Dear Single Fathers, Ladies and Gentlemen,

Children are a great gift. Raising them requires not only love, attention and care but also time and money. Within families, both these resources are often limited.

This is particularly true in the case of single parents, on whose shoulders tremendous responsibility lies.

To make life easier, there are a number of support offers on the part of the state for families in Germany.

This updated brochure, developed within the Single-Parent Families Working Group of the Bayreuth Family Alliance (Familienbündnis Bayreuth), presents various offers, ranging from financial assistance and advisory services to children and youth care facilities in Bayreuth, to which all families have access.

We hope that this guide provides welcome help for all your questions.

The Bayreuth Family Alliance sees itself as an umbrella for child- and family-friendliness in our city. People from various areas of work and life collaborate under this umbrella with the aim to continuously improve the existing – already good and extensive – offering for families.

Yours,

Thomas Ebersberger
Lord Mayor

Familienbündnis Bayreuth – Bayreuth Family Alliance

Umbrella for child- and family-friendliness in the City of Bayreuth

Under the umbrella of the Bayreuth Family Alliance (Familienbündnis Bayreuth), numerous representatives from the fields of politics, business and society are committed to working together to achieve a shared goal: the continuous improvement of the extensive family offers. They include the City of Bayreuth, welfare organisations and churches, the Employment Agency, the chambers of commerce, the University of Bayreuth, dedicated individuals, and many more.

The Alliance has achieved a lot since its foundation in 2005. For example, the annual KinderUniversität (Children's University) was launched, a network of family-friendly companies has been set up, and regular action days have been organised. Project ideas have evolved into continuous offerings which sustainably contribute to improvement of the family-friendly climate in the City of Bayreuth.

With the Family Alliance in the City of Bayreuth, a network for family friendliness has been built up that is always open to further interested participants.

The Single-Parent Families Working Group under the aegis of the Family Alliance is a group of staff and volunteers who attend to the concerns of single parents. Through its work, the working group draws attention to regional offers and initiates new projects. With the publication of this guide for single-parent families, you are provided with all relevant information and contact persons for the topic of single parents. The brochure is also available in digital form at www.familien-in-bayreuth.de.

BAYREUTH FAMILY ALLIANCE – WORKING TOGETHER TO STRENGTHEN FAMILIES

Legal Fundamentals

Within families (particularly in the case of single parents or separated parents), time and money are often limited resources. Therefore, in Germany, there are a number of support offers on the part of the state, ranging from childcare facilities to child benefits.

These offers are presented on the following pages.

Maternity Protection Act

The German Maternity Protection Act applies for all expectant mothers in employment, i.e. also for marginally employed persons, homeworkers, domestic workers and female apprentices.

In the last six weeks up to the expected date of delivery, expectant mothers are only allowed to work with their express consent. New mothers are not allowed to work at all in the eight weeks following the birth.

In the case of premature and multiple births, the return-to-work date is extended to 12 weeks after giving birth.

In addition, outside the protection periods there is also a general prohibition of piecework and assembly-line work as well as overtime, night work and working on Sundays.

CHILDREN ARE OUR FUTURE – MORE TIME FOR FAMILY LIFE

Further regulations protecting the health of expectant mothers against risks, overstrain and exposure to hazardous substances at the workplace are contained, inter alia, in the German Directive concerning the Protection of Mothers at Work.

From the beginning of pregnancy until four months after childbirth, the employer is not permitted to terminate the employment relationship.

The protection period under the Maternity Protection Act also covers girls at school and female students, and mothers are meanwhile better protected in the event of the birth of a child with disabilities.

Parental leave

Under the German Parental Allowance and Parental Leave Act, there is a legal entitlement to 36 months parental leave which can be split between both parents, enabling them as working mothers or working fathers to dedicate time and energy to their child while at the same time keeping in touch with their job.

Legal Fundamentals

The employment relationship remains intact, and the employer's consent is not required for parental leave.

As a rule, if you are in employment or vocational training, you can take parental leave up to your child's third birthday. This applies for all types of employment relationship, including fixed-term employment contracts, part-time jobs or mini jobs. You are also entitled to a parental break if you are an apprentice, if you are participating in a vocational retraining course, undertaking in-company training or employed as a homeworker.

Parental leave enables you to take a complete break from work or reduce your working hours. At the end of the parental leave period, you are entitled to return to your previous working hours. Returners must be employed in accordance with the terms and conditions set out in their employment contract, and they are entitled to an equivalent job.

While you are on parental leave, your job is protected. From the time you notify your employer that you intend to take parental leave, but at the earliest eight weeks before the start of parental leave, as well as during the parental leave period, you cannot be dismissed.

During parental leave, you are allowed to work part-time for a maximum of 30 hours per week.

PARENTAL LEAVE – GROWING TOGETHER!

Prerequisites for parental leave:

- You and your child live in the same household.
- You are the main person caring for and raising your child.
- You do not work more than 30 hours a week during your parental leave.

Rules for births up to 30 June 2015:

Each parent can split their total parental leave into two time periods. If you wish to spread your break over more periods, you require your employer's consent. In addition, with your employer's consent, you can transfer up to twelve months to the period between your child's third and eighth birthday.

You need to inform your employer in writing that you are planning to take parental leave at least seven weeks in advance of the leave period.

Mothers need to inform their employer about their parental leave plans at least seven weeks before the end of the statutory maternity leave period.

Different rules apply for births from 1 July 2015:

For births from 1 July 2015, up to 24 months of parental leave can be taken flexibly between the child's third and eighth birthday. The employer's consent is no longer required, unless the leave period is precluded by urgent operational reasons.

Each parent can split their total parental leave into three time periods. However, the employer is permitted to refuse consent to the third period of parental leave for urgent operational reasons if this period lies between the child's third and eighth birthday. The submission deadline for parental leave between the child's third and eighth birthday is 13 weeks prior to commencement of the leave period.

Protection against dismissal for parental leave continues to apply, from submission of the parental leave notification. For parental leave between the child's third and eighth birthday, protection against dismissal applies at the earliest 14 weeks before commencement of the leave period.

You do not need to take parental leave to receive parental allowance.

Following your parental break, you are entitled to work reduced hours, provided that the company has more than 15 employees, you have been employed for more than six months and there is no operational reason for the employer to refuse a reduction in working hours. You must submit an application for reduced working hours in writing at least three months in advance.

The parental allowance to which you are entitled during parental leave will help you to focus on your newborn and to take a complete break from work or work fewer hours. The parental allowance compensates for part of your income, ensuring that your family has the basic means of subsistence. Parents who did not have any income before the birth are also entitled to parental allowance.

There are three types of parental allowance, which can be combined: basic parental allowance, parental allowance plus and partnership bonus.

Legal Fundamentals

www.familienportal.de/egr (German only)

The abbreviation “egr” stands for parental allowance calculator, where you can enter data relating to your financial situation for a non-binding calculation of the expected amount of your parental allowance.

Child benefit

You are entitled to child benefit if

- you are a German citizen and live with your children in Germany;
- you are a foreign national and live in Germany.

Child benefit is paid to the parents. This includes adoptive parents. In certain circumstances, the benefit can also be paid to stepparents, foster parents, grandparents, siblings or the children themselves.

All children are entitled to child benefit, irrespective of their family's income. Child benefit is paid for all children up until their 18th birthday. If your child is unemployed, the entitlement exists up until their 21st birthday. If your child is undertaking vocational training, studying, or doing voluntary service, the benefit is paid until they reach the age of 25.

If the family's income is not sufficient for the entire family, a supplementary child allowance can be claimed. If the supplementary allowance is granted, you are entitled to claim extra assistance for your child for education and participation activities, such as free lunches at a daycare centre or school and a school supplies package in the amount of 150 euros per school year. Also, you do not have to pay daycare facility fees.

Tax relief for single parents

Single parents are entitled to an additional tax allowance which is automatically taken into account in tax class II, the tax class for single parents.

Benefits for education and participation

If you are on a low income, you may be entitled to extra benefits for your children – for example, for extra tuition, music and sports courses, or lunch with other children at school, at a daycare centre or with a childminder.

Childcare

Children from one year and upwards are entitled to a place in a childcare facility regardless of whether the parents are in employment or not. This means that, by law, children are entitled to go to a daycare centre or be cared for by a childminder.

The costs of daycare are socially staggered according to income or number of children. Families on a very low income who receive benefits under the German Social Code (SGB II and XII) or the Asylum Seekers' Benefits Act are exempted from daycare fees.

Parent and child law

Parent and child law covers regulations pertaining to children and their relationship with their family. This includes, inter alia, the law of descent, custody rights, rights of access and the right to maintenance.

Law of descent

The mother of a child is the woman who gave birth to the child. The child's father is the man,

- who is married to the child's mother at the time of the birth,
- who has acknowledged that he is the father, or
- whose paternity has been established by a court of law.

In the case of unmarried parents, acknowledgement or judicial determination of paternity is required.

Paternity can be acknowledged at any time. The acknowledgement (Vaterschaftsanerkennung) must be officially certified. This requires the consent of the child's mother. The mother's declaration of consent also needs to be officially certified. The father can sign official acknowledgement of paternity at the Youth Welfare Office (Jugendamt), the registry office (Standesamt), the local court (Amtsgericht) or through a public notary.

Legal Fundamentals

Through determination of paternity, the family relationship of a child to their father is clarified. This relationship gives rise to claims to maintenance and also inheritance on the part of the child vis-à-vis the father.

Custody rights

Parental custody for an under-age child includes rights relating to the care of the person and the assets of the child as well as representation of the child.

The parents have joint custody,

- if they are married at the time of the child's birth,
- if they marry one another after the birth,
- if they officially declare that they wish to assume joint custody.

Joint legal custody declarations need to be officially certified at a Youth Welfare Office or through a public notary. If parents with joint legal custody separate, the joint custody remains, regardless of whether they are married or not.

Following separation, one of the parents can apply to be granted sole custody. Such an application can also be made for parts of parental custody, e.g. with regard to the right to determine place of residence.

If parents divorce, a decision on parental custody is made only if one of the parents applies for this. Otherwise, joint parental custody remains in force. If the parents are not married and they do not sign a custody declaration, the mother has the sole custody right.

However, if the father submits a corresponding application, the Family Court will transfer parental custody to the parents jointly.

If the mother refuses her consent, all fathers have the option to obtain a decision of the Family Court (under German law on the reform of parental custody for unmarried parents).

Rights of access

The child has the right to have contact with each parent, and each parent has the right and the duty to have contact with the child.

The right of access is generally in the child's best interests and serves to maintain contact between the child and the persons who are particularly close to them. This also includes the child's grandparents and siblings as well as the natural father who is not the legal father if he shows serious interest in the child (as set out in German law on the strengthening of the rights of the natural but not legal father).

The child's parents decide between themselves when, how often and how long contact is to take place. In this respect, the Youth Welfare Office may be called on for help and an agreement set out in writing.

If the parents do not reach agreement on the form of contact, they can opt to have the dispute settled by a court of law. The competent court in this instance is the Family Court.

Under the Act on Proceedings in Family Matters, the rules pertaining to violation of agreements regarding access have been toughened. If a parent breaches an existing contact order or agreement, the relevant court can impose sanctions, e.g. in the form of fines.

The parent with whom the child lives is generally obliged to encourage the child to maintain contact with the father or mother having a right of access.

If you have any questions or wish to request any changes regarding the contact situation, you can get in touch with the Youth Welfare Office for advice at any time. Applications relating to determination of the right of access must be submitted to the Family Court.

Right to information

The parent caring for the child and the parent with a right of access are obliged to inform one another about all circumstances of significance for the child's well-being and development. The right to information exists regardless of custody and access rights until the child reaches the age of majority.

The parent may request information on the child's schooling and career development, their life situation and their state of health. The parent requesting information must have a legitimate interest in such information. Parents who are excluded from contact also have a right to information.

Legal Fundamentals

Right to maintenance

Under German law, direct relations have a maintenance obligation towards each other. These are people who are directly descended from one another, i.e. grandparents, parents and children.

If the parents of an under-age child are separated, the parent with whom the child is growing up normally fulfils their maintenance contribution through the care and upbringing of the child. The other parent, irrespective of contact, has an obligation to pay cash maintenance, meaning that this parent generally fulfils their contribution through payment of a monthly sum of money.

Claims to maintenance exist from birth of the child, and maintenance claims of under-age children have priority in fulfilment.

If the parents are not married to one another, paternity must be acknowledged or determined by a court in order to be able to claim maintenance.

With regard to the maintenance amount, the so-called “Düsseldorfer Tabelle” (Düsseldorfer Tabelle) sets out the guidelines for determining concrete maintenance requirements. A child’s regular and normal living costs have to be covered with the amounts laid down in the table. If, in individual cases, the need is greater – possibly due to illness – this may be taken into account to increase the amount.

An under-age child whose married or unmarried parents are separated has the possibility to obtain an enforcement order regarding the maintenance claim quickly and inexpensively in a simplified procedure. However, this simplified procedure cannot be used if a maintenance order or legal proceedings are pending.

The simplified procedure falls under the competence of the Local Court/Family Court; claim forms are available from the Youth Welfare Office or any Local Court. Here, you will also receive assistance with filling in the forms.

The court will determine the maintenance by way of court order. Based on the order, enforcement can be applied for if maintenance is not paid or not paid on time.

You are advised to contact the Youth Welfare Office or a lawyer in order to clarify whether the simplified procedure is appropriate in your case. The Youth Welfare Office is legally required, inter alia, to advise and support single mothers and fathers, free of charge, in asserting maintenance claims for the child.

In addition, under the Legal Advice Aid Act (Beratungshilfegesetz), you have the possibility to obtain legal advice free of charge or for a significantly reduced fee. Your Local Court or a lawyer can provide you with information on this option.

The prerequisite for payment of maintenance is the ability of the person with the support obligation to pay. He/she must be left with a so-called deductible to cover their essential living costs. The Düsseldorf Table also contains recommendations in this respect.

The state child benefit serves to support the parents. It is paid to the parent in whose household the child lives. In the case of under-age children, child benefit reconciliation between the parents is performed by reducing the amount of cash maintenance to be paid by half of the child benefit.

If the parent with the support obligation does not pay any maintenance, single mothers or fathers receive a maintenance advance to secure their child's maintenance.

Children of single parents receive a maintenance advance until they reach the age of 18. The six-year limit on how long you can receive this payment, which was in force until 1 July 2017, is no longer valid.

Bavarian family allowance

The Bavarian Family Allowance Act (BayFamGG) came into force on 1 August 2018. The new Bavarian family allowance has been available since 1 September 2018.

All parents with one- and two-year-old children (from the age of one until the age of three) profit from the Bavarian family allowance.

This family allowance is paid without regard to income or employment.

“Elterngeld” parental allowance

Parental allowance is a benefit for parents of babies and young children. It serves to enable parents to bring up and care for their child.

Parental allowance compensates to a certain extent for a loss of income if the parents work less or not at all for some time after the birth. In this way, parental allowance helps to secure families’ financial livelihood. Parental allowance is also granted to parents who were not in receipt of income prior to the birth of the child.

Financial Support

There are three types of parental allowance:

- basic parental allowance (Basiselterngeld)
- parental allowance plus (ElterngeldPlus)
- partnership bonus (Partnerschaftsbonus)

PARENTAL ALLOWANCE – YOUR FINANCIAL FOUNDATION

“ElterngeldPlus” parental allowance

(for births from 1 July 2015)

ElterngeldPlus can be paid for up to 24 months for couples over the partner months, and for single parents for up to 28 months. It can also be claimed beyond the specified period (after the child reaches 14 months of age). The possibility to claim ElterngeldPlus and to extend the payment period as far as possible is irrespective of whether the parents work during the payment period.

If, in addition, parents utilise the option of the (partnership) bonus, the longest possible payment period for one parent is extended to 28 months of life, and for couples and single parents to 32 months of life.

Bavarian childcare allowance

The Bavarian childcare allowance (Krippengeld) was introduced on 1 January 2020 and can only be granted from this point in time. This means it can only be paid for children born after 2 January 2017 who are already over one year old.

These benefits are explained in detail online at www.zbfs.bayern.de/sprache/english/families-children.php.

Where to apply for Elterngeld, ElterngeldPlus and Krippengeld:

Zentrum Bayern, Familie und Soziales
(ZBFS) – Servicezentrum Bayreuth

Spousal support

Spousal support does not have anything to do with children's maintenance. It serves solely to cover the needs of one parent. As a rule, both spouses are individually responsible for supporting themselves.

Spousal support is paid only for a number of specific reasons. These reasons can be caring for a child, unemployment, old age or illness.

Divorced mothers and fathers are entitled to post-marital maintenance if they cannot be expected to work due to their caring for a child. This applies for at least three years following the birth of the child. Entitlement to this maintenance can be extended beyond the child's third birthday if justified for individual child-related or individual person-related reasons established on the basis of an equity review.

If there is no entitlement to this maintenance, there may in certain circumstances be an entitlement to spousal support on the grounds of illness or unemployment. Calculation of spousal support is dependent on the individual case to a greater extent than child support because more individual factors are relevant.

As a general rule, you should seek advice in this respect from a competent lawyer in good time.

Information can be obtained from established lawyers or the Family Court at the Bayreuth Local Court:

Amtsgericht Bayreuth, Friedrichstr. 18,
95444 Bayreuth, Tel.: (0921) 5 04-0

Child support

Every under-age, unmarried child is entitled to support, irrespective of whether the parents are married to one another or not. Children aged between 18 and 21 are treated the same as under-age children if they live in the same household as one of their parents and they are in general education. Parents are fundamentally obliged to support their children until they have completed some sort of vocational training.

The amount of child support is dependent on the income of the parent with an obligation to pay cash maintenance and on the age of the child. Calculation of the support entitlement is based on the legally defined minimum amount of support in accordance with the German Civil Code (§ 1612a BGB) (see first line of Düsseldorf Table).

Financial Support

The parent with whom the child lives fulfils their obligation of support through caring for and raising the child and is therefore normally not obliged to pay cash maintenance. The parent with whom the child does not live is obliged to pay cash maintenance.

A maintenance claim can only be enforced if it is a legally titled claim. This means that, in order to collect maintenance, an enforceable title is required, in the form of an order, a judgement or the like. Enforcement can be pursued from such documents relating to maintenance payments. Enforcement means compulsorily enforcing, with the help of a state procedure, a titled claim which is not being paid by the debtor voluntarily.

Child benefit

Parents receive child benefit (Kindergeld) for their children. This has to be applied for in writing from the Family Benefits Office (Familienkasse) at the Employment Agency (Agentur für Arbeit). Child benefit is paid up until the child's 18th birthday irrespective of any own income. From the age of 18 to 25, the child must be in education or first degree studies in order to be entitled to child benefit. For children who are unable to begin some form of vocational training due to the lack of an apprenticeship or training place, the rules for children in education apply. In the case of unemployed children, child benefit is paid until they reach the age of 21.

Tax allowance for children

Child benefit forms part of income tax law. Most parents receive child benefit for their children. From a specific level of (gross) income, tax allowances for children apply instead of child benefit. The tax office (Finanzamt) will calculate which is the more favourable in your tax assessment. In both cases, the subsistence minimum for a child is exempt from tax.

Child supplement

Child supplement (Kinderzuschlag) is available for parents on a low income living in the same household as their children under 25 years of age. The supplement is paid upon application and for an unlimited period of time. The application must be submitted to the Family Benefits Office (Familienkasse) at the Employment Agency (Agentur für Arbeit). Recipients of this supplementary child allowance are also entitled to receive various payments as part of the education package.

For a family to have the right to receive the child supplement, the parents' income must cover their own needs as defined by the German Social Code (SGB II), i.e. mainstream provisions and pro rata appropriate costs for housing and heating. This means parents receive either Unemployment Benefit II or the child supplement, never both concurrently.

Childcare costs

There is a wide range of childcare offers available, however these all entail costs. Childcare costs can be offset against tax: Parents can claim for two thirds of the childcare costs for their children from birth to the age of 14. Proof of payment (invoice and bank account statement) has to be submitted in order for the tax concession to be granted.

Parental contribution subsidy

The Free State of Bavaria grants a parental contribution subsidy in the amount of 100 euros per month which is automatically deducted from the parental contribution. This subsidy is for all families without regard to income. The subsidy is paid for children from the month of September in the year in which the child turns three.

Federal Foundation “Mother and Child” (voluntary benefit)

This foundation grants benefits to pregnant women and mothers with small children in emergency situations. Support is tailored to the individual situation of the applicant. For example, subsidies can be paid for expenses arising in connection with the birth of a child. The application has to be submitted for the first time before a child's birth. Financial assistance from the foundation is dependent on income and subordinate to social welfare benefits or Unemployment Benefit II.

WHERE TO APPLY FOR FOUNDATION GRANTS

Maternity allowance

During the statutory maternity protection period (see section "Legal Fundamentals"), working women receive a maternity allowance. An application for maternity allowance must be submitted to your health insurance company and your employer.

Social welfare benefits

Social welfare benefits ensure that you have the means to live if you do not receive any other benefits in case of need.

Persons of working age who are temporarily unable to work, e.g. persons granted a pension due to a reduction in working capacity or persons suffering from longer-term illness, are entitled to benefits. Any person who is unable to work at least three hours a day due to illness or disability for a not foreseeable time period, i.e. for longer than six months, is deemed to be not capable of gainful employment within the meaning of social security regulations. The benefit amount is on the same level as the basic financial security for employable persons (Unemployment Benefit II).

Financial Support

You can claim for additional needs, inter alia:

- if you are pregnant, from the 13th month of pregnancy
- if you are a single parent, irrespective of the age and number of your children
- if you have a disability
- if, for medical reasons, you require an expensive diet.

With only a few exceptions, one-off benefits are included in the standard benefit rate. Exceptions include in particular:

- initial basic equipment for your home, including household appliances
- initial basic equipment in terms of clothing during pregnancy and in preparation for the birth

The relief amount is included in the tax class II rates, meaning that single parents already pay less tax during the course of the current year. Single parents are only granted this tax relief and classified in tax class II if they live without any other adult person in one household together with at least one child for whom they receive child benefit.

Single parents who receive little or no or only irregular maintenance payments for their child from the other parent can apply to the Youth Welfare Office for payment of a maintenance advance (this also applies in the case of non-clarified paternity). Widows'/widowers' and orphans' pension

Survivors' benefits can be granted from the statutory pension or accident insurance schemes or the civil service pension scheme. The prerequisite for payment of a pension is that the deceased has fulfilled the general qualifying period of five years in the statutory pension insurance scheme.

An entitlement to widows'/widowers' pension exists if the spouse has died and the marriage had lasted at least one year (with the exception of unexpected death).

Orphans' pensions can be either a full orphans' pension (neither of the parents responsible for maintenance is still alive) or a partial orphans' pension (only one parent responsible for maintenance is still alive). Both natural children and adopted children are entitled to an orphans' pension. Stepchildren and foster children are also included if they lived in the household of the deceased. In addition, grandchildren and siblings may be entitled to an orphans' pension if they lived in the same household as the deceased and the deceased was the main person responsible for their maintenance.

Generally, an entitlement exists until the child reaches the age of 18, under certain conditions at maximum until their 27th birthday.

These conditions are if the orphan is in school, vocational training or further education, or doing voluntary service, or if a disability precludes them from supporting themselves.

Pension for child-raising periods

The pension for child-raising periods is a little-known benefit. It can be paid to divorced spouses if the ex-spouse has died and they are bringing up an under-age or disabled child (irrespective of age). In this case it is irrelevant whether it is a child of the deceased.

Financial Support

The pension for child-raising periods is paid from the person's own pension account, not from that of the deceased. Therefore applicants must themselves have fulfilled the qualifying period of five years in the state pension insurance scheme. Moreover, the entitlement is forfeited if applicants have remarried or entered into a registered civil partnership again.

Housing allowance

The housing allowance helps low-income households to pay their housing costs. If you are in rented accommodation, you receive the allowance as a rent subsidy; if you are an owner-occupier you receive a so-called "burden subsidy" (Lastenzuschuss). As a rule, any legal entitlement depends on:

- the number of family members living in the household
- the level of family income
- the amount of the (eligible) rent or burden.

If you are receiving Unemployment Benefit II, social benefit, social welfare benefits or minimum needs-based provision on the grounds of old age or reduced earning capacity, or you are a member of a so-called "needs-based community" (Bedarfsgemeinschaft) as defined by the Social Code (SGB II), you are not entitled to a housing allowance as your living costs are covered as part of these benefits.

If the needs of all persons living in the needs-based community are covered through income and housing allowance for a continuous period of at least three months, the housing allowance is deemed to be the priority benefit.

Living in Bayreuth

When parents separate, the question is often how and where they want to carry on living with their child(ren). How are you going to find a new place to live? Before you start looking for somewhere new to live, you should obtain information on your existing rights to your current home.

Bayreuth is a city with a high quality of life. A city surrounded by green countryside, with a wide range of political, business, cultural and social facilities and organisations, but nevertheless a city of short distances and affordable living space.

BAYREUTH – A GOOD PLACE TO LIVE

Open housing market

We recommend that you start searching for a new home in good time. You will find offers at housing associations, or every Wednesday and Saturday in the local daily newspaper "Nordbayerischer Kurier". It is also worth taking a look in the weekly ad paper "Wochenspiegel" that is distributed every Saturday free of charge to all accessible households in Bayreuth and the surrounding area.

Private landlords also offer living accommodation through real estate agencies or online, e.g. at www.immowelt.de or www.immobilienscout24.de.

If you are unable to find anything suitable here, you can always post an ad yourself.

Social housing

You have the option to apply to the City of Bayreuth Housing Authority (Wohnungsamt) for social housing (housing subsidised through public funds) or a so-called "Wohnberechtigungsschein" certifying that you are eligible to live in housing built with state subsidies.

A written application is required. You will find the application form and the relevant income declaration online at www.bayreuth.de under the online forms ("S" for Sozialwohnung) as well as at Citizens' Services in the two Town Halls. The housing authority will also gladly send you the forms by post.

With your request for subsidised accommodation, you apply to be included on the housing authority's waiting list (the housing authority will send you offers of accommodation) and also to be granted a general certificate of eligibility with which you can apply for social housing independently to various housing associations throughout Bavaria (in this case you will receive offers directly from the landlord/housing managers).

The prerequisite for being included on the list and for the general certificate of eligibility is that the total income of the accommodation seeker and members of their household does not exceed the income ceilings stipulated by law. The ceiling levels depend on the respective type of subsidy for the accommodation.

We will gladly advise you by phone up-front and let you know which documents are required for validation and processing..

Bayreuth is an area with a relatively high level of demand for accommodation, i.e. there are more people seeking accommodation than there is accommodation available. Therefore there may be lengthy waiting times for the provision of social housing. Childcare

Needs-oriented, high-quality childcare is vital for the compatibility of family and working life – this is especially true in the case of single parents. If you have decided to pursue a job, training or studies, you need good and reliable childcare. Yet even if you do not work and you are spending your parental leave with your child, it may be important for you and your child that a different designated care giver or facility care for your child.

All daycare offers are subject to charges, with the exception of some school supervision offers. If you have difficulties with the financing, you can apply to the Youth Welfare Office for assumption of costs. Depending on your income, childcare costs may then be paid in full or in part.

YOUR CHILD IN GOOD HANDS!

Please note that there is an application deadline for a place in a childcare facility. This is always mid-February for the following childcare year.

Example: If your child needs a place in the period 1 September 2021 to 31 August 2022, the application deadline is mid-February 2021. Applications can only be submitted online via www.portal.little-bird.de/suche/bayreuth. We nevertheless recommend that you also contact the childcare facility personally or arrange for an appointment to visit.

Over the past few years, in addition to full-day childcare in kindergartens, the City of Bayreuth has expanded its childcare offer in particular in the areas of crèche and after-school care to keep pace with requirements. In close cooperation with the church and independent welfare organisations, this has given rise to a wide variety of service providers and offerings. There are more than 2,500 highly qualified childcare places available for all age groups in well over 40 childcare facilities.

Today, mixed age groups are the norm. This means both children under three years of age and schoolchildren can be and are being cared for in childcare facilities.

Childcare

Basically, the following types of childcare facilities are available:

Crèche (Krippe): Small groups with children from eight weeks or one year up to their third birthday.

Kindergarten: Children from the age of three up to starting school.

After school facility (Hort): For schoolchildren in the first to fourth grade, and also beyond.

Kinderhaus: All age groups, whereby no age group dominates.

Home daycare: Home daycare for children normally under the age of three with childminders ("day parents") who are registered with the City of Bayreuth, as an alternative to a place in a crèche. The Youth Welfare Office will help you find a place in home daycare. For those who have booked a childminder or daycare place, there is an entitlement to substitute care (e.g. if the day carer is ill). In the City and District of Bayreuth, this is organised through the daycare facility "Markgrafen-Frösche". The parental contribution is aligned with crèche charges.

To receive childcare allowance (Krippengeld) for care provided by a day parent, you need to apply to Zentrum Bayern, Familie und Soziales. Applications for the parental contribution to be waived must be submitted to Amt für Kinder, Jugend, Familie und Integration.

Daycare facilities

Daycare facilities

Daycare facilities ("kita" in German for short) is the umbrella term for crèches, kindergartens, after-school and kinderhaus facilities which, just like home childcare with day parents, are incorporated in law in the Bavarian Child Education and Supervision Act (BayKiBiG).

Childcare on Saturdays

In cooperation with and financed by the City of Bayreuth, Diakonie Bayreuth has launched a pilot project for childcare on Saturdays for children of pre-school and primary-school age. Job Centres, the Youth Welfare Office and the Single-Parent Families Working Group of the Bayreuth Family Alliance had identified a need for care that was particularly relevant for single parents as they are often prevented from taking up work due to a lack of childcare on Saturdays.

School childcare offerings

Lunchtime supervision
is offered at some primary schools in Bayreuth up to 2 p.m. It includes the option of lunch for the children, but there is no supervision of homework.

Extended after-school supervision (follow-on supervision) provides care for schoolchildren with the option of lunch and supervision of homework up to 4 p.m.

Compulsory all-day schools offer a continuous structured stay at school, from primary school to grade 10, until at least 4 p.m. on four or five days a week, whereby pupils are required to attend on a specific number of days a week and for a specific number of hours on those days. The concepts of the morning and afternoon activities are aligned. There is guaranteed all-day pedagogical supervision by teachers. Participation in lunch is obligatory.

Open all-day schools (OGTS) are a school offering of all-day support and care on a voluntary basis, for schoolchildren in grades 1 to 10. This family-friendly support and care in short and long groups includes lunch, homework supervision, educational support measures and recreational offerings on the part of the school's cooperation partners. Parents have the option to register their children for the all-day programme for single days only; the minimum is two afternoons. For information on the cooperation partners with regard to the offers at the open all-day school as well as lunchtime and follow-on supervision, please contact the respective school.

The two combined OGTS facilities at the St. Georgen and Herzoghöhe primary schools represent special cases. Because of their daycare-like structures, in particular from a quality point of view, they are also listed under the daycare facilities.

A selection of childcare facilities is included in the brochure "Wegweiser Bildung" (German only) published by the City of Bayreuth. The brochure is available at the Town Halls and online on the City of Bayreuth website.

Schoko e.V.

The story of the former chocolate factory at Gaußstraße 6 (St. Georgen) and its transformation into a sports and culture centre dates back to 2007 when skateboarders were looking for a possibility to carry on with their sport in winter. With a lot of effort on the part of many individuals, the then Kulturkraft Club incorporated the first indoor skateboarding facility into “Schoko”.

Schoko had to be closed in 2009, for safety reasons, and didn't open again as an official youth culture and sports centre with integrated skateboarding facility until 2013. The facility is now operated by Verein Schoko e.V., headed by Peter Weintritt.

The centrepiece of the facility is the skateboarding hall built by the members of Schoko e.V., which in conjunction with the “Schanz” skateboarding park and the garden mini ramp makes the region a skateboarders' paradise.

A variety of indoor and outdoor workshops, projects and concerts also take place here on a regular basis.

Upper Franconia Crisis Service

The Crisis Service is a psychosocial advice and assistance service for adults affected by a psychological crisis or in a mental state of distress. Family and friends of people in crisis can also seek help here. The staff in the crisis service coordination centre provide advice by phone only. If longer-term psychosocial support or medical treatment is required, callers are transferred to the respective facility. If advice by telephone is not sufficient, two members of the mobile crisis team make their way to the caller to clarify the situation in a personal on-the-spot conversation.

The Upper Franconia Crisis Service is part of the Bavarian Crisis Service network and has been set up and further developed in Upper Franconia by the District of Upper Franconia under the direction of the President of the District Council, Henry Schramm.

The local centre and the mobile unit are run by an association of independent and private welfare organisations.

The Upper Franconia Crisis Service became operational in the spring of 2021. You will find all information as well as the toll-free telephone number for the whole of Bavaria on their

State-approved advisory centre for pregnancy-related matters (Staatlich anerkannte Beratungsstelle für Schwangerschaftsfragen), Landratsamt Bayreuth

We are there to support you during pregnancy and up to your child's third birthday. Our service is tailored to the needs of pregnant women, mothers, (expectant) fathers and their families. Apart from information and advice on pregnancy, we can also help you find social and material assistance, and we answer questions relating to prenatal diagnosis, contraception and sex education. Our tasks also include counselling in the case of conflicts created by pregnancy. In the decision-making process, the pregnant woman can clarify her questions with the counsellor and discuss her individual situation including all options in order to develop a perspective for the future. The path chosen by the woman is accepted and respected, so the counselling is open as far as the outcome is concerned, and the support is independent of the decision.

In a situation where you, as a single mother or father, have to carry the responsibility alone, without the support of a life partner, we accompany you along the way with our specialist knowledge and an open ear for your

BIG – health promotion project for women
(Gesundheitsförderprojekt BIG für Frauen)

The “BIG” project improves opportunities for women in difficult life situations, such as single mothers, women receiving Unemployment Benefit II and women with a migrant background. The aim is for them to benefit from the diverse positive effects of exercise. Alongside the health aspect, BIG helps to improve, in particular, social contact between participants. The health offers range from fitness and swimming courses to Nordic walking and dancing, all at low cost.

A special feature of this health promotion project is that the health offers are developed and implemented together with the women.

Regeneration and treatment breaks \("Kur"\) for mother/father & child

As a single parent, you are unable to take turns with a partner in caring for and bringing up your child. You are there for your child(ren) day and night. At the same time you go out to work, run the household, and you on your own have to solve all the problems and conflicts that this often involves. That takes a lot of energy. The independent welfare organisations focus on offerings specifically tailored to the particular situation and needs of single mothers and fathers.
